

The Australian Government and biodiversity

Leadership in developing national policies and strategies for biodiversity conservation, based on sound science.

Caring for our Country is the Australian Government's natural resource management initiative which is focusing on achieving specific targets through investment in national priority areas including biodiversity.

The initiative has a clear goal, a business approach to investment, and articulated outcomes and priorities. Biodiversity protection on private land is pursued through the National Reserve System while biodiversity conservation on private land is encouraged through stewardship approaches with land managers.
